New Religious Programming

Every year brings new life. Friendships are given new life. Our interests are given new life. People we love die and are granted a new spiritual life. Babies are born and given brand new life from the Lord. At the core of all this new life is the Lord - the Lord communicating through unique individuals a message to us. He lets us sense His heavens through a newborn. He communicates our need for fullness, growth, humility, strength, understanding, and love through friends and family. He brings new life within us every morning and works to open our eyes to the new life we most need each day. What do we do with all that energy and light coming from our Divine source? What have we done with it over the course of our lives?

The New Church religion is unique in that it teaches, "Every religion is a way of life, and its life is the doing of good" (Doctrine of Faith 1). We can take two main ideas from that quote: the life you live in the way you live it is your personal "religion", and if you want your "religion" to have the most life within it, you should make your life about "doing good". We also don't need to quote all the passages in our doctrine that teach us that your guiding "love" is the thing that defines you at any given time and positions you with the angels (or evil spirits) that are around you now and will lead you to your angelic (or hellish) society in heaven (or hell). Considering this information, where are you with your religion today? Where will you be at the end of this year?

Let's imagine our life as an ever-building radio tower - the higher it gets, the farther its signal can travel. The tower is built upward, year by year. The first year it sends out some pretty amazing and strong signals for such a tiny tower, mostly because the angels are running all the programming being sent out. As time goes on, the tower grows higher, and we are more and more in control of what is being broadcast. In our teen years, the offerings from our station were played too loud, or too quiet, or both. The variation of stations to choose from in our twenties and thirties is mind-boggling. Some of us air programs all about how to make more money, for some of us it is never-ending talk radio about childcare, and for others it is constant party music. Our towers have a good signal that can reach out to many, but it is listened to mostly by people who share our same interests. By our 40s or 50s, our towers are plenty high to reach a good far distance - for some of us the programming is eclectic, for others it is highly specialized, maybe even esoteric. By retirement age, we have our daily line-ups figured out - easy listening in the early morning, talk radio before lunch, classic rock after lunch, a little news and classical music in the evening (or whatever your line-up is). As our tower gets ever higher, we start to put more thought into what our programming contains. We think, "What will be my final broadcast?"

What has your "radio tower" aired over the years? Do you look at a certain portion of your "tower" and think, "wow, I'm glad people don't listen to that stuff anymore? I wish I could remove that from my life." The thing is, like a radio tower, you can't remove it without taking the whole tower down to that point, and then the rest of the tower wouldn't fit if you tried to put it back on. We are all stuck with whatever we did in our past; the good part is that we don't air those programs anymore. That's how "new life" works; it is always growing, and building off what it was, whether what it was before was good for others to listen to, or complete garbage. The critical challenge for us is to take care of what we are "airing" now. What would you fill the airwaves with today if you were gone tomorrow? What a fun and exciting thing to spend some time contemplating!

I think about all the dear people we lost this last year (and every year) and how wonderful each one of their "frequencies" was. There will never be a "call sign" (or "religion") as they held on this earth. And, luckily, unlike a physical station, I can go up or down the "radio band" any time and still catch their signal.

General Announcements

I am also always looking for new “programming” to listen to and can’t wait to hear all the great things that will be aired by all the little ones that are growing up around me. I can’t wait for their little signals to reach me here in Glenview, IL., on Park Lane. All those air-waves around us contain new signals of love and goodness in their own unique individual way. Hope you tune in. Happy New Year.
